JAPANESE CIVIL RULER SLAIN

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

JAPAN, which never has decided whether the civil or military authorities are supreme in the affairs of government, held an election last week-end. The premier, who led the faction that believes, as Englishmen and Frenchmen and Americans believe, that civil authority comes first, was sustained by the common people. So today a gang of young army officers burst into his residence, killed him, and killed two other cabinet officials of the Japanese empire.

2 Local Men Are Seriously Hurt in Collision on No. 67

A. L. Powell, Hal Foster, Formerly of Spring Hill, Injured

TOURIST IS STRUCK

Passing Truck, They Collide With F. F. Freeman, of Oklahoma

Two former Hempstead county men, seriously injured in an automobile wreck on No. 67 three miles south of Prescott late Tuesday afternoon, were believed to be slightly improved Wednesday in Cora Donnell hospital at Prescott.

The injured: A. L. Powell, 55, and Hal Foster, 65, formerly of the Spring Hill community south of Hope. They are related.

A third person, F. F. Freeman, traveling salesman from Norman, Okla., also was injured. His condition is not believed serious, attaches of the Prescott hospital said Wednesday.

Foster sustained a fractured skull, broken arm and leg and internal injuries.

Powell sustained a broken arm, lacerated face and internal injuries. Mr. Powell was taken to the operating room at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday to have fractures re-set.

Freeman suffered slight cuts on the face and arms. He had not been released from the hospital at noon Wednesday.

Witnesses said that Powell and Foster, approaching Prescott in their car, passed a truck, and before they could return to the right side of the road they met Freeman's car head-on.

Mr. Powell and Mr. Foster were in Hope Tuesday afternoon and were returning to their homes at Prescott when the accident occurred.

Prohis March on, Columbia Co. 'Dry'

Little Opposition as 'Drys' Oust Package Liquor Stores

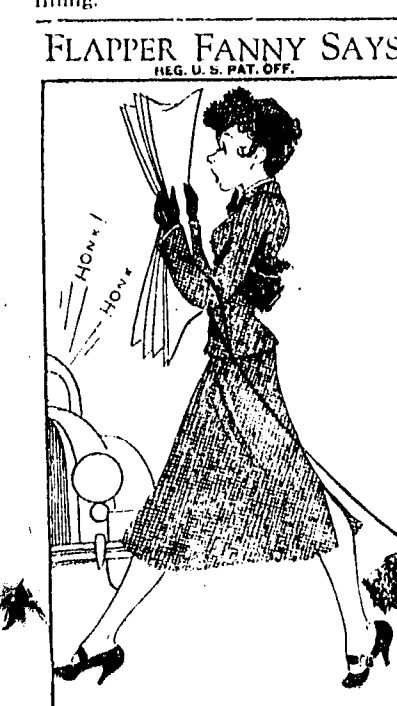

MAGNOLIA, Ark.—(AP)—Columbia county became the sixth in Arkansas Tuesday to outlaw sale of liquor through licensed stores.

Unofficial returns from 10 out of 22 precincts in Tuesday's local option election gave the dries 830 votes to 429 for the wets. The three missing precincts will not change the results.

Magnolia, where there are three liquor stores, voted dry 282 to 33. Waldo voted 124 to 70 to close its lone liquor store. The only boxes going wet were McNeil, Taylor, College Hill, Box Springs, Rocky Mound, Shannon and Harrison.

Editor The Star: Under separate cover I am sending you a copy of a London newspaper (News Chronicle). Besides giving all about the king's funeral, it contains much that may be of interest to you.

We have read your paper less than a year and have always thoroughly enjoyed reading your editorials.

But I want to make one request. Please publish at least one serial story that is suitable for girls 10 and 12. You may think yours is a paper for grownups, and children have no business reading the stories. But mine insist on it. I wish you would please give us some of the Ruth Fielding stories, or the Pollyanna stories, or something by Booth Tarkington, or P. G. Wodehouse. I am sure such fiction would be appreciated by the majority of your readers.

MRS. F. T. McPHERSON
February 18, 1936
Rosston, Ark.

Mrs. McPherson is right about that—the average newspaper serial certainly is not adapted to youngsters' reading.

The daily newspaper's main "box-office appeal" is with women and child readers. Men, as consistent subscribers, aren't worth a darn. After 16 years in the business, I know—and if I didn't know by experience I still would know that this is the adage of the newspaper business: Circulation must be built on family-wide appeal.

In theory as least, the cartoons appeal to the youngsters (and you grownups read them, too!), while the serial story makes a bid for the women readers.

There ought to be a special text feature appealing to youngsters, just as Mrs. McPherson says; but it may be difficult to provide it in the average small-city daily. It wouldn't be hard to get the material from our syndicate, NEA Service, Cleveland, Ohio—but it might be a problem to find space for it daily in a four-to-six-page newspaper.

However, we promise to investigate the matter.

The Country Doctor

A Novelization of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film, Starring the Dionne Quintuplets With Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Peterson, June Lang, Michael Whalen and Slim Summerville

BEGIN HERE TODAY

DR. JOHN LUKE, country doctor in the little north woods settlement of Moosetown, receives an emergency call to the lumber mill where MIKE SCANLAN, lumberman, is crushed under a fallen log. Mike has a close call, but the doctor and NURSE KENNEDY save him. With both legs in casts, Mike is obliged to stay behind when the last boat of the season departs, taking the crew of lumbermen south for the winter.

Dr. Luke and his efficient assistant, Nurse Kennedy, see the boat off. As it is about to sail, MacKENZIE, lumber company manager, appears. MARY, his daughter, is on the boat. MacKENZIE forces her to return home.

ASA WYATT, father of seven, comes with an urgent call for Dr. Luke.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER III

It was a boy at the Asa Wyatts'. The editor of the North Bay Weekly Tribune was less than astonished at news of the birth of another Wyatt heir when Asa called to have a notice inserted in the paper. It was the seventh outcome in a row that Wyatt had made just such a call.

Then winter closed in on Moosetown, and there set in the quiet, uneventful routine of the frozen days following another. But there was always plenty for the country doctor to do. He called regularly at Mike Scanlan's boardinghouse, where Mike fretted as the shattered legs slowly mended, and tinkered with an amateur short-wave radio set he was gradually assembling. There were fewer accidents, now that logging was suspended, but an unusually severe winter brought plenty of sickness, and there were always babies.

The cold deepened, and a series of blizzards climaxed in one that threatened to shut off Moosetown from the outside world completely, drifting the straggling roads to the point where even Dr. Luke's sleigh was an undependable vehicle.

It was then that diphtheria struck. Beginning with a single case in the large family of La Croix, the half-farmer, half-trapper whose cabin stood isolated nine miles out in the heavy woods, it spread rapidly. Not only all La Vroix's large brood came down with it before the doctor's precautions could have effect, but then he learned with horror that the La Croix children had attended a church supper to which half the children of the community had come. The parents had thought it was just croup, and neglected to call the doctor until it was too late. Three of the La Croix children died, and the other two barely pulled through.

But now from many isolated cabins, and from the fringes of Moosetown itself came red-faced, frantic men with steaming horses or even dog-sleds, imploring Dr. Luke to "come quick."

In his own sleigh if roads permitted, or on the dog-sledges of the farmers or loggers, Dr. Luke went wearily for 18, 20 hours a day to the cabins.

Always he found there the same terrible story. A young child, or sometimes a young girl, or a young woman, gasping on a tumbled bed, lips blue, the little body shaken by agonizing coughs. The simple parents of the backwoods stood dumbly waiting for the doctor to come, helpless in the face of what they did not understand. Often the doctor would find a child in the last stages of diphtheria in the same bed with not-yet-affected brothers and sisters.

His supply of antitoxin, used unsparingly, grew smaller. Without help of Father Bonel, Dr. Luke could never have stood the strain. It was Father Bonel, parish priest, who suggested that the little, bare, church of Moosetown be converted temporarily into an isolation hospital.

There, where bright chromes of the saints looked down from above the tin lamps that marked the Stations of the Cross along the sides of the barren room, the children tossed and fretted under the visitation they could not understand. Some of the wooden pews had been shoved together to make beds. Wooden cots, as many as could be hastily gathered, stood in rows. Several mattresses lay on the bare floor. It had not even been possible to get enough beds. The whole church from chancel rail to door was pitifully crowded with the impromptu beds.

As cases began to appear in the town itself, Constable Jim Ogden's little daughter, Laura, was one of the first to show signs of the disease. Leaving hurried instructions as to the care of the other children, Dr. Luke himself took Laura to the hospital.

Outside the door of the church in the snow stood a knot of anxious women whose children lay within. All too often, Nurse Kennedy would have to come out and whisper to one of them tidings of which some instinct

"When did you come in here?" the doctor asked, iron in his voice. "Just this morning," Mary admitted. "I wanted to do what I could."

Electric Debate Is Put Off Week

Roosevelt Vetoes 50 Millions' Extra for Feed, Seed Loans

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Faced with opposition that threatened a prolonged debate, Senator Norris, Nebraska Republican, agreed Wednesday to a majority leadership suggestion of a week's postponement of further discussion of the billion-dollar rural electrification bill.

President Roosevelt's veto of his bill authorizing 50 millions for 1936 seed and feed loans to farmers was challenged by Senator Smith, Democrat, who said he would "insist on a veto" to override the veto "as soon as the time is propitious."

The president took the position that sufficient funds for lending to distressed farmers are available under the work relief act, that farmers are not in dire straits for seed loans in normal channels, and that congress went outside the budget estimates.

Senator Byrd, Virginia Democrat, was named by Vice President Garner Wednesday as chairman of a special committee to study and report to the next session a plan for reorganizing government departments with the view of saving millions of dollars in operating costs.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, is a member of the committee.

Death occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. W. Parson, South Grady street. She had been ill only a short time.

Funeral services were held at 3 p. m. Tuesday from the home of Mrs. Parson, conducted by the Rev. Robert Martin of Bodewy. Burial was in Rose Hill cemetery.

Surviving are four daughters, Mrs. J. W. Parson of Hope; Mrs. Tom Parson of Pittsburgh, Texas; Mrs. Delia Edges of Glenwood, Ark.; and Mrs. L. A. Alford of Murfreesboro.

Three sons, Walter Keen of Hope; Lonnie Keen of Hugo, Okla.; and C. W. Keen of Hope. Two sisters and two brothers also survive.

House changes were accepted in most instances. The conference report probably will be called up in the house Wednesday. Senate action also will be required before the AAA replacement legislation can go to the White House.

The measure came out of the conference chamber still carrying the original broad powers for the secretary of agriculture to make grants to farmers directly or through states for two years, to be followed by a permanent program of subsidies going only to states that adopt federal formulas for crop control through changing from commercial to soil-building crops.

The conferees accepted the house provision requiring the secretary of agriculture to re-establish as fast as practicable the pre-war parity between the purchasing power of farm and non-farm net income without discouraging production below the normal domestic human consumption in the years of 1920-29.

Also accepted with some modification was the house amendment permitting tenants and share croppers to participate in subsidy benefits under the temporary program.

3 Name Wilson as Lewisville Bandit

Identify Him at Trial for First National Robbery of 1933

LEWISVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—Three witnesses Wednesday identified Leonard Wilson as one of three gunmen who robbed the First National Bank of Lewisville of $632.80 on September 18, 1933.

Arguments started in the trial Wednesday afternoon.

D. W. Gladney, cashier; Edmund Gargill, assistant cashier, and Mrs. Dave Patten, bookkeeper, identified Wilson as the man who held a gun on them while a confederate scooped up all the cash available.

Unofficial reports from the Orient said militarists seized control of the Japanese government through a coup d'etat Wednesday after assassinating several political leaders.

Martial law was proclaimed throughout Japan, the Reuters (British) News Agency reported.

The powerful militarist bloc, which has pushed Japan's campaign for expansion in Manchuria and in China, and for equality on the seas, was said by Reuters to have seized the government and police offices.

Among those assassinated, said Reuters' unconfirmed reports, was Viscount Koriyoko Takahashi, minister of finance and outstanding leader who often opposed the military clique.

Strict Censorship

A strict censorship was clamped down and efforts to reach Tokio by cable or telephone from the United States were unavailing.

A Singapore Reuters dispatch said the Japanese consul was advised by his foreign office that military authorities had seized the home of Premier Kuniyoshi Okada, a retired admiral, all police offices and the residence of Fumio Goto, home minister.

Okada's government had just been upheld in a bitterly contested general election.

Trading on the Tokio and Osaka Stock Exchanges was reported in Shanghai to have been suspended.

Although only meager and unconfirmed reports were received, diplomats in capitals throughout the world followed the situation with keenest interest.

The Domei (Japanese) News Agency in Shanghai said the coup was engineered by younger army officers.

The censorship situation was without parallel in Japan in recent years. When an attempt was made by the Associated Press to telephone to Tokio from San Francisco the transpacific service reported the exchange was "out of order."

Similar attempts from Manila, New York and Shanghai were unavailing, which observers in New York believed indicated a grave situation.

"Not Alarming"

The Japanese consulate in Manila said it was informed from Tokio that the situation is "not alarming." A spokesman said he was advised the trouble was caused "by a few soldiers" but apparently he had no details.

Chinese officials were perturbed and reported fearful that the reported government switch would mean an increased Japanese campaign on the mainland.

A long battle for control, with military and police forces, was reported.

The Country Doctor

had forewarned her.

Entering the hospital with little Laura, Dr. Luke was surprised to see a new figure seated at the head of a cot, assisting the weary Nurse Kennedy. As soon as a place had been found for the constable's Laura, Dr. Luke strode to the bedside where sat the new nurse. As he approached he heard the words, "... and the way I do is just pretend. I just pretend I'm not here at all ... that I'm in Montreal, just having the finest time in the world with all the toys and the other little girls there ..."

It was Mary MacKenzie. As he knelt to administer treatment to the suffering youngsters, Dr. Luke asked, in matter-of-fact tone but with iron in his voice: "When did you come in here?"

Mary was a little overawed by the stern voice. "Just this morning," she admitted. "Nurse-nurse said she needed a little help. I thought I would do what I could."

"Did you ask your father?" pursued the doctor relentlessly, never looking at her as he adjusted the hypodermic needle.

"Yes," breathed Mary, a little defiantly.

The doctor rose abruptly, and made a sign to Father Bone, who understood only too well. He set down the armload of stovewood he was carrying, and began to don his vestments.

Mary seeing the movement, knew what it meant. She began to cry softly.

Dr. Luke made his way doggedly among the improvised beds, stopping to stroke a brow here, pat a hand, or give a word of reassurance. Suddenly, at sight of a familiar figure beckoning from the church vestibule, he quickened his pace and stepped into the vestibule, closing the door after him. It was Jerry, the Mossetown telegraph operator.

"Well, Jerry?" he asked anxiously. "The wires ain't just broke, Doc. They're down, both the telephone lines and the telegraph! I don't know how far, probably miles! The blizzard's been getting worse!"

"When?" "There was no need for further question. Worry clouded the doctor's face.

"I ain't got to tie to you, Doc. I don't know when. Maybe days, maybe weeks. You kin guess as well as I kin. I can't even phone North Bay!"

The doctor, his face drawn, was thinking aloud. "Even if we got word cut, nobody could get in here for a week, anyway, I guess. Brightening a bit he turned to Jerry with, 'All right. Thank you. If anything at all turns up, let me know right away. 'I know, Doc. I will,' promised Jerry, and braced himself to return into the flying snow.

The door had scarcely slammed behind him when a white-faced Nurse Kennedy, frayed by sleepless days and nights, appeared in the vestibule.

"Wasn't that the telegraph operator?" she demanded. "What did he say?"

Dr. Luke took a quick grip on himself. "Looks better," he lied bravely. "Ought to be able to get a message through in a day or two, maybe tomorrow."

"Oh, I hope so! I hope so!" cried the nurse. Her voice was a prayer. "You know we have less than half a box of serum left!" The doctor nodded very slowly.

Suddenly the nurse's iron control began to waver. Half a step toward the doctor she took, and then:

"Why can't they have a hospital up here?" she cried wildly. "Why won't they listen to you? All these terrible accidents to the lumberjacks—I can stand that! But these children—! I can't stand their eyes! They keep looking at me, and their eyes say, 'Can you help me? Can't you do something?' I can't do anything! I can't stop the pain! I can't help them to breathe! We have nothing to work with ..."

The doctor's quick voice was angry and icy all at once.

"Katherine!" He glared coldly at the nurse. Her struggle to regain control of herself was visible.

"Go back to the children!" said Dr. Luke sharply.

Nurse Kennedy turned obediently and went back into the church, her shoulders quaking as she advanced.

Beside the bed that was now empty sat Mary MacKenzie, weeping softly. Nurse Kennedy approached, and looked down at her with some of the doctor's own steely coldness.

"Stop that bawling!" she snapped. "If you can't control yourself, what good can you do the children?"

The ghost of a grim smile flickered over the doctor's face as he observed this little tableau. Then, wrapping a muffler and the fur coat collar about his throat, he too stepped out into his waiting sleigh.

It was a short trip, but a bitterly cold battle against the drifts to get to Mike Seaton's boarding house. Leading through drifts above the tops of his Arctic, Dr. Luke entered the house and rushed to the room where Mike sat by a table, his legs still in casts. Mike was leaning forward, sternly, earphones over his ears, toward a table where lay a jumble of radio parts and instruments.

"Any luck, Mike?" snapped the doctor, not even stopping to remove fur coat and coat as he entered the room. Mike shook his head. "If I only knew more about this thing," he complained desperately. "I only got it all together this morning. I don't even know if it's all here ..."

"You've GOT to get somebody, Mike!" breathed the doctor. "You've GOT to!"

"CQ, CQ, CQ—any amateur, especially Montreal—come in, please! An emergency! CQ, CQ, CQ—calling any amateur ... Mike's voice dropped. Five minutes went by. Ten. Mike looked appealing at Dr. Luke.

"Go on! Keep it up! You've got to get somebody!" Dr. Luke's voice was insistent. "Those children, up there at the church ..."

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD.—And what—height—has happened to the stars of other days?

Well, an actress went into the make-up department at Universal to be retouched for her tiny part as a hard-bitten old biddy in "Shove Bont," and the makeup chief said, "Hello, Florin!" Flora Finch looked closely at him, then exclaimed: "John Gorman!" They had a do-you-remember-when reunion.

Miss Finch has done well enough since the days that she and John Bunny played together in two-reel comedies for Vitaphone in 1912. About once a year she comes out of retirement to do a small role for sentiment's sake.

Gorman is one of the oldest-timers in the business. As far back in 1906 he was one of the voices in the first talkies—stood behind the screen and read lines while the images were flickering. Later he played leads for D. W. Griffith, then went into the makeup business.

From Hits to Hits

Paul Panzer, whose stage experience included "Florinda," became a prominent movie heavy in the Pearl White serials, "Perils of Pauline," a member? Now he plays bits for Warners.

Leo White is a contract actor for Warners, but he also was a leading comedian before the rise of Chaplin. He and Wallace Beery were teamed by Essanay in 1912 in a series of Swedish nursemaid comedies; Beery was the nursemaid and White a French count. He later worked with Chaplin.

You haven't heard much of Jacqueline Suehrdsen lately, but she was a star of the years of 1917-23. In fact, "Jackie" owned the home in which James Cagney now lives. She's another veteran on the Warner list, and has a daughter who works for the same studio. That's Jacqueline, Jr., a trim little dancer of 18.

Still Attached to Films

Theda Bara is in Hollywood, but retired into quiet domesticity—the wife of Director Charles Brabin, who directed most of her films. Anna Q. Nilsson went from acting to the screen agency business.

Betty Blythe, once "The Queen of Sheba," isn't such a veteran in years, but devotes most of her time to ranching in the San Fernando valley. Now and then she comes out of seclusion for a small part; "Anna Karenina" was one; "Petrified Forest" the latest.

Tully Marshall is almost 72 now, but spry, nomadic, and content. He played on the stage 45 years, entered the movies in 1916, appeared in "Intolerance," "The Covered Wagon," and scores of others. He came back for a bit in "Tale of Two Cities," and lived in an automobile trailer parked across the street. From the motion picture studios while the picture was in preparation. One morning they went to get him for some retakes, and Marshall and his caravan were gone. The picture was held two weeks until they found him, happily touring in Arizona.

Next Reunion

Paramount is about to release "The Previews Murder Mystery"—if it retains that title—in which an assortment of veterans appear. They include Rod LaRocque, Conway Tearle, Jon Keith, Jack Mulhall, Bryant Washburn, Reginald Denny, Franklin Panama, and Philo McCullough. Pola Negri is still starring—in a European picture called "Mazurka." And the aforementioned Pearl White is living comfortably in Paris.

Buster Keaton, after a divorce and long illness, is coming back to the camera. Educational has signed him for six comedies to be made in New York. He leaves for the east Easter week.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks pink.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes these good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Bile is the gentle, yet amazing, in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse any thing else, 25c.

The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

So persistent is the craze for slender figures, that women throughout the country indulge in all sorts of dangerous methods to reduce weight.

Every few months brings some new fad or technique with which a great many women immediately experiment until science shows the harm that these methods cause, and their fallacy.

During 1935 women everywhere were trying dinitrophenol, until eventually cases began to appear in which the use of this drug had caused cataracts of the eye. There are now a great many women who have paid for their vanity by losing their sight.

Previously women had used preparations containing thyroid which were dangerous to life and health. Many had developed symptoms of hyperthyroidism, which involves a rapid heart, irritability of the nervous system, and other systemic upsets of a serious character.

Still others had used patent medicines containing drugs without efficiency, and had spent their money without any result except damage to health.

Today women in various parts of the country are flocking to milk farms to try the newest fad. On these farms they subsist for varying periods on milk, orange juice, and soup; the

Today's Health Question

Q.—I am 54 years of age. About six months ago the skin on the back of my hands became loose and would not snap back. My muscles also have become flabby, and some of my teeth have become sensitive to pressure. If this is old age, why should it come on so?

A.—There is some loss of muscle tone and also a reduction in the fatty layer of tissue under the skin as persons grow older. This may account for the apparent flabbiness of the muscles. Age, however, does not account for sensitiveness in the teeth. You should have your teeth examined by a dentist. You should also have a thorough physical examination to ascertain the state of your health and should repeat this procedure each year.

milk sometimes being taken in the form of acidophilous milk, lactic acid milk, or the klabber known among the Bulgarians as yogurt.

Such a diet is exceedingly dangerous, because it brings about weight reduction far too rapidly, and because it does not provide a sufficient amount of mineral salts, especially iron, to sustain the blood in a normal healthful condition.

You may see today women who are haggard and sallow wandering about in a weakened condition, but still rather proud of the fact that they have taken off, in a short period of time, anywhere from 10 to 15 pounds. You may see the same women a month later with 10 to 15 pounds restored on those parts of the body on which they would rather have the weight absent, and nothing to show for their experiment but disappointment and some loss of health.

A Book a Day
By Bruce Catton

The insane and ribald humor of the late Thorne Smith brought belly-laughs to a good many readers in the last few years. So I suppose a lot of people will be glad to know that three of his funniest novels are now available in one volume, entitled "The Thorne Smith Three-Decker."

In this book we find "The Stray Lamb," "Turnabout," and "Rain in the Doorway." They display this writer's peculiar talent at its best, and if you have never made his acquaintance this is a good time to begin.

As you may have heard, Thorne Smith's books are both mad and improper. The most wildly impossible things happen in them, and happen, so to speak, with a perfectly straight face.

For instance, in "The Stray Lamb," a middle-aged stock broker wakes up one morning to find that he has been turned into a horse. After divers experiences in this guise he becomes, successfully, a goldfish, a seagull, a tomat, a lion, and a horrible scaly reptile—to the vast annoyance of his family.

Likewise, "Turnabout" sees a husband and wife undergo an unexpected and magical transformation whereby each has to occupy the other's body for a time; and "Rain in the Doorway" finds a citizen stumbling into a department store which exists outside of space and time, with everything happening in direct violation of all ordinary laws of conduct.

These stories drag badly, in places. But they do have moments of almost unbearable hilarity, and if you have a taste for the bizarre you will find them exasperatingly funny.

Published by Doubleday, Doran and Co., the omnibus sells for $2.50.

One time I wrote an article that went something like this:

"If three-year-old Mamie won't get her face washed, or spatters her cereal over the table with her spoon to see how far she can bat, it might be useful to remind her of someone she knows and likes very much. 'What would Miss Etta say, for instance, if she saw her little friend all dirty and tousled?' Or what would Stubby think, that nice clean little doggie that ate and drank with agility and dispatch and never left a spot on the floor?"

I got some retorts on that one. For goodness sake! Why couldn't I get over all that palaver about bad youngsters? Why did I help to spoil hundreds of small children who needed a good smack or two to straighten them out? My "Miss Etta's" My "Stubby's." Ridiculous!

Forget Trouncings

I often wonder how the smackers made out. At the age of three there is something mighty perverse in most children. And unless a child is completely cowed by fear, he is likely to bob up after a trouncing as serene as a roly-poly ash-stand; and do it all over again with renewed gusto.

The matter that brought this back to memory was a talk with the mother of a two-year-old boy. She was very proud of Bucky. Bucky, I discovered, was as busy as the frog in the milk pail. And like said frog was assiduously churning up good footing for the future. He, Bucky, was in the Junior Orchestra. He was a Scout. He was a stamp collector. Naturally he had his lessons to do; and, of course, he had to eat, sleep and bathe.

"Dear me, do you ever see him?" I wonder. "He hardly needs parents at all, does he?"

"No, I often think that," she sighed. "But when I consider the influence of the people who are training him, I wouldn't change it. He adores his orchestra leader, Mr. Grimm. How could I ever get him to practice? I couldn't—that's all. And as for his Scout Master—really, Bucky would go through fire and water for him. It is his uncle who got him interested in stamps. They are such friends, and Phil has such a wonderful influence over him, I often say to Jim, my husband, they are more like brothers."

"I think you are being very wise to see the influence of fine people and let your boy be guided this way," I agreed. "The combined power of interest, plus a certain eagerness to have those whom he admires think well of him are two tremendous forces. You have your place, they have theirs. Children know very well their status in their parents' eyes, but they are seldom quite as anxious to prove themselves to their fathers and mothers as when entirely on their own, removed from routine environment."

Back to the babies, who great difference is there between Mamie pleaser, Miss Etta, and Bucky pleaser Mr. Grimm? Hero-worship has always developed us. It always will. And by "hero," in its broader sense, may be meant even a pet or a toy. Anyone, or anything, a little child sees reason for imitating, and whose good will he works for, may be so classed. Likes and dislikes play a big part all through life.

CRUISE TO NOWHERE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JANE WESTON feels her dreams have come true when she sets out on a three weeks' ocean cruise, accepted in payment for the salary due her when the magazine for which she worked as typist suspended publication.

On board the ship, she meets handsome DIRK STROM, expert ski jumper, as penniless as Jane. The trip was a gift to him from the publisher of a child whose life he saved.

Dirk introduces Jane to his friend, SNOWSHOES, a detective. Others on board are NORA LANE, famous news and owner of the Koliner diamond; wealthy, eccentric MADAME DOREMI; DIRK's KENZ, and MAXIE JACKSON, blackmillers; TINO ROSSI, opera singer; KEN MARTIN and NORA BAYES, door away entertainers.

Dirk and Jane spend much of their time together. Then a misunderstanding comes between them. Dirk meets Nora Lane and is attentive to her. Tino Rossi becomes Jane's constant escort.

Nora Lane confides to Dirk and Snowshoes that she is in terror of extremists and Snowshoes agrees to get on her bodyguard. He persuades her to turn the Koliner diamond over to the purser. They go to her stateroom to get it.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY. CHAPTER XIII

DIRK came up to Jane at the bar. He wanted to talk with her, if only to tell her he was glad she was having a good time. Jane was surprised by giving him her hand with a low, boyish swing.

"Hello, stranger," she said. "I thought I'd lost you," she added, "before I had got to know you."

He held her hand, and it made his new-found misery more vibrant and more keen. She introduced him to Tino Rossi.

"I am sorry," Tino said, "that the charming Miss Lane has retired so early. I had hoped—"

But the sudden look of pique on Jane's face told Dirk that they should not talk about the actress now.

"You have the advantage of me with Jane," Tino said, "You have known her first! Please stay with us. I would be obliged to you. It occurs to me," he went on, in his stilted, continental tone, "that I owe a private apology to Ken Martin, the orchestra leader, for not singing tonight at the cabaret. I should see him now—only a moment."

Dirk ordered a Tom Collins and sat in a high stool close to Jane. Tino went over to talk with Ken.

While Dirk's drink was being mixed they watched Tino carrying on an animated conversation, with much shrugging of the shoulders and much pantomime.

Then Dirk sat and merely looked at Jane. He toyed with his drink while he gazed.

She sat there, returning his frank gaze. He had won. She had won. And this moment was sweet, though a little bitter, too.

Suddenly he smiled, and it was so naive and wholehearted that Jane smiled, too. It was as if they shared some delightful secret and were too proud to divulge it. Dirk laughed, and Jane laughed. Their laughs were so hearty that people in the room looked at them.

Abashed, they both turned to their drinks, eyeing each other askance, like two small children.

Dirk talked into his glass. "I see you got your baritone," he said, and then stipped.

Jane said, through her teeth, not looking up from her drink. "I see you got your actress. We both seem to have got what we looked for and dreamed of on this cruise."

"Yeah," he said simply, caressing his glass with a hand.

"Yes," she said after him.

"What do you think of Nora Lane?" he begged. "I think she's one of the greatest humans I ever knew. I never saw but one other actress in person. That was the leading lady in a stock company that made the old Birdcage Theater in our mining town."

"I had the same feeling about Phyllis de Vere, the leading lady in stock plays. She was herself so real—"

"I think Miss Lane must be a charming person," Jane said. "I've seen her on the stage, and nobody doubts her great talent. In 'The Portent' she was superb."

Somehow there was a barrier between them again, and they shared nothing. But Jane said, "I'm glad you found such an agreeable companion on this cruise."

"And I'm glad," he added generously, "you found what you wanted on this cruise."

JANE said, a little petulantly, "While we're flinging bouquets, what do you think of Tino Rossi?"

O little white ribbon of road that winds
Through the valley far away,
Do you lead to the rainbow's pot of gold,
To the mountains that stand so tall and bold,
Or down to the lovely bay?
Right into the heart of the setting sun,
You seem to wend your way,
Or perhaps to some sparkling cave below,
Where the faeries dance and the soft winds blow—
I shall follow you some day,
O little white ribbon of road that winds
And vanishes toward the sea,
Will you take me back to auld lang syne,
To those happy days that once were mine,
Back to the days of use-to-be.

FRANK BUCK'S "FANG AND CLAW"

THE RESULT OF A FULL YEAR OF WORK, danger and hardship has been condensed into the less than two hours that it takes to unroll Frank Buck's "Fang and Claw," which comes to the Saenger Theater Thursday and Friday.

The noted animal collector spent nine months in the jungles of the Malay Peninsula and northern India, and the balance of the year in traveling and cutting and editing the 100,000 feet of film to its exhibition length.

This picture, which is said to be a most worthy successor to the noted animal traps, is a thrilling cinematic record of his jungle exploits. "Bring 'Em Back Alive" and "Wild Cargo" attains new heights of interest in that it reveals to the public some new secrets of trapping and outwitting the wary birds and animals of almost every known variety, the pictureization being spiced with many hairbreadth escapes of Buck and the members of his expedition.

What is "the magnificent obsession?" It refers to a magical pattern of living which local theatergoers will have an opportunity to learn when they see "Magnificent Obsession," which comes Sunday to the Saenger with Irene Dunne and Robert Taylor in the starring roles.

Resolution Given Late Henry Yerger

Yerger Faculty Praise His 50-Year Educational Record

The following resolution in behalf of the late Henry C. Yerger, for 50 years a leading negro educator in the South, was adopted this week by the faculty of Yerger High School, of which he was superintendent.
Whereas: By the grim hand of death our beloved Principal Henry Clay Yerger has been taken from our ranks. For many years he has stood at the head of our schools in Hope, and was always found to be a safe and sane leader. He was founder of Teacher Training School in the South, and a leader in many civic enterprises.
Whereas: His whole life has been a most valuable contribution to the welfare of humanity. Be it resolved that by his death we have sustained a great loss. Be it further resolved that the educational interest of our state and local community has lost one of its most valuable advocates. Be it further resolved that his whole life has been earnestly devoted to the welfare of his community, in every phase of its development, and that the community has lost one of its most valuable citizens. We hereby wish to express our heartfelt sympathy to the family. We suggest that copies of this resolution be sent to the bereaved family, a copy to the official record of the school, and a copy to the local press.

Therefore: Be it resolved that we humbly bow in submission to Him who doth all things well, by saying "Thy Will Be Done."

Japanese Civil

Maritimers usually holding the upper hand, has been waged in Japan. The army and navy have made increasingly higher budget demands and that for the current year is the highest military budget in the nation's history.

Premier Okada was not held in warm esteem by the "big navy" group when he went into office two years ago because of his policy of conciliation.

He had won an unexpected victory in the recent general election when the pro-government Minseito party won 205 seats to the 172 of the anti-government Seiyukai.

A feature of the campaign which may have had a bearing on Wednesday's events, was the surprising gain by the Shikai Taishuto party, which is opposed to the militarists.

STORIES IN STAMPS

By I. S. Klein

FLIGHT TO THE MOUNTAIN

MANY years ago, when mountains lived and there were men and women mountains, according to Maori legend, Taranaki, which is now Mount Egmont, stood far inland between Mount Tongariro and Lake Taupo, and close by stood the beautiful woman mountain, Phangau.

Tongariro loved Phangau, but one day, while Tongariro was away, Taranaki paid court to Phangau. On his return, Tongariro attacked Taranaki for trying to steal his love, and Taranaki fled to the sea, where he now stands. In his flight, he tore a long chasm, that is now the Taungarua river, and he left a great hole where he once stood. That is now Lake Rotoma. Warm springs in this extinct volcano, that rises to a height of 8250 feet, are all that is left of the fiery love that once warmed Taranaki's breast.

Today, this mighty Don Juan is pictured on the three-shilling value of New Zealand's latest pictorial issue.
